While still in law school, Ryan joined the firm as a law clerk. While working in that capacity, Ryan regularly assisted the firm's attorneys with a wide variety of cases and research projects, including both litigation and transactional matters. After earning his Juris Doctorate from the University of St. Thomas School of Law, Ryan was invited to join the firm as a full-time attorney.

Today, Ryan's practice includes representation in the areas of family law, municipal law and business and commercial law. Much of his practice is devoted to litigation, and Ryan often represents the firm's clients in mediations, arbitrations and the courtroom.
